

EDITOR'S NOTE

Dear Readers and Contributors,

Greetings and a warm welcome to our very first issue of Global English-Oriented Research Journal !

“Optimism is a strategy for making a better future. Because unless you believe that the future can be better, you are unlikely to step up and take responsibility for making it so.”

Noam Chomsky

When we set out to create an online journal, our goal was to breathe e-life into critical, scholarly and erudite studies related to multifarious facets of English Language, Literature, Linguistics and Education. It is an attempt to widen the level of global knowledge sharing by setting the stage for researchers & creative writers to interact with a community of readers across the globe.

We are honored to share the works of so many committed researchers and academicians. You may have a look at their profiles at the end of this journal. Thanks to our writers for sharing their thoughts with us and giving them to you, our first readers. Our words of thanks also stretch towards the committed and efficacious Board of Editors who turned the dream into reality through inspiration and optimism, as Chomsky stated.

We appreciate your support and are so happy to have you as readers of Global English-Oriented Research Journal. We welcome you join us in our journey towards the horizons of creativity and myriad ways of learning/teaching.

"Hold fast your dreams, for without them life is a broken-winged bird that cannot fly."

Langston Hughes

Enjoy Reading!